Labor Day Draws Big Crowd Out to Lagoon.

CLAM BAKE MAIN FEATURE

GAMES AND CONTESTS PROVE INTERESTING.

Labor day brought 12,000 persons to Lagoon. In spite of lowering clouds and oconal flurries of rain, they stayed unif a late hour. The big clam bake the fames, the contests of skill and the bleasures of the grounds kept all happy furing the afternoon. In the evening they danced in the javillon until the last rain's warning beit called the crowd brough the gates, and these were officially closed for the winter.

The committee had gotten the clams from Puget Sound, where they are a stase crop. They had procured just about bake them—men who had officiated at such feasts back on Long Island before millionaires palaces began to crowd out the clam beds. These men worked hard, washing and wrapping the bivalves, until shellfish. Word went forth to that effect.

Whatever the incentives, the clams were the main drawing card of the day. The multitudes surged up to the barrier crected about the ovens in a seething mass. Attendants bawled themselves hoarse getting them into a double line. And then other attendants tired their arms keeping them from trampling one another under foot at the gate to the little enclosure. By such heroic methods semblance or order was maintained and they went through the place like sheep combing out of a pen. On long benches small wooden dishes were ranged, each holding about a quart of clams. Attendants toiled replenishing the tables as fast as the crowd emptied them. And the members of the crowd, clams in hand, emerged to cat and to share with friends.

Trains both ways were crowded all afternoon and evening. The rush for the resort began before 12 o'clock, and reached its climax when the 4 o'clock train pulled out from the downtown station with every available inch of sitting and standing room occupied. During all the jam no one was hurt. One woman fainted during the struggle for clams and she was given immediate attention.

Manager Jacob Bergemann of the Lagoon said last night that he estimated 12,600 persons as the number who had entered the grounds. This is the record day for the resort. Notah further said that Jefries was Brit's choice and that, inasmuch as Jefries has put himself out of the field, the referee would naturally fall to the choice made by Neison, namely George Siler of Chicago. As it is known that the Britt faction is strongly opposed to Siler, there is a prospect of a lively meeting tomerrow when the representatives of the pugilists come together to discuss the question which has been thrust upon them by the big fee demanded by Jeffries, it being conceded that none of the parties in interest will pay $2,000 to the man who will officiate as umpire next Saturday.
